PRESENTS

The 2nd Annual AIDS Research Symposium

Monday, October 19, 2009

9:00am to 1:00pm

Ronald Reagan UCLA Medical Center Auditorium

(B Level, Room B130, 757 Westwood Plaza, Los Angeles, CA 90095)

In an effort to promote the research and publications produced by our junior investigators and seed grant recipients, the UCLA AIDS Institute will be holding a half-day symposium on October 19, 2009 to highlight new investigators working in AIDS and AIDS-related research- featuring research in basic and translational science, clinical therapeutics and biomedical prevention, international health services and policy, as well as prevention and clinical research.

Oral and poster presentations will be held and discussed during this half-day symposium in which we hope to foster cross collaborations among investigators, opportunities for mentorship among our junior faculty members, as well as a chance for senior faculty members to learn more about the work being conducted by our up-and-coming investigators.
